History, Culture, and the Law is an interdisciplinary major that enables students to understand how legal systems are shaped by cultural norms and historical developments, and how social change has been and can be created through legal processes. After receiving a grounding in principles of historical method and jurisprudence, students bring to bear the interdisciplinary frameworks they have begun to develop in one of six culturally focused concentrations: Africana Studies, Asian American Studies, Culture and Colonialism, Digital Humanities, Gender and Sexuality, and Latino/a, Latin American, and Caribbean Studies. Students develop flexibility in perspective-taking, ability to work in interdisciplinary frameworks, and appreciation of cultural diversity that will enable them to make a positive impact in their chosen spheres of action.
